

CUPS?...NOPE, PINTS!

THE WEEKLY PINT

Volume 1, Issue 3

April 13, 2006

CEO BRIEFING: BEN SMITH

It's hard to believe that another week is already over. Despite some of the bad weather we encountered for the beginning of the service project, we have made some impressive progress. On Tuesday afternoon we were able to get enough people to fill two different shifts, and after a day of hard work we completed Service Project 1. Furthermore, Service Project 2 flew through their tasks, and the downstairs dance center was completed in only two days.

I would like to thank everyone who volunteered this Monday and Tuesday to make sure we were able to get all of our service work completed. The extra hours you all supplied really made everything possible.

Finally, Oral Reports are under way. Believe it or not, we present April 20th, which is only one week away. I know it seems like the class is almost over because we have now completed both our service and business projects, but it is VERY important that everyone stays motivated for the completion of Oral Reports. We all saw how hard we worked on Operating Plans, only to find out how much we actually left out. Therefore, I ask that everyone puts in two more weeks of dedication to our company to help make sure our final presentation will be as informative and entertaining as possible. I want to make sure everyone has a lot of fun completing our presentations and leaves our company with good memories.

On that note, I just ask everyone to keep up the great work and let's finish the semester as successfully as possible. Have a great week!

BUSINESS BRIEFING: ALEX MACKINGER

Not all too much going on right now with the business division, due to the fact that we sold out in only two hours on March 31st. We have customer satisfaction surveys going out this week which will provide us with some feedback regarding our performance and the quality of our product.

I would like to congratulate the service division for a job well done at the Milton YMCA. Both the outside and the inside of the YMCA look great thanks to all the hard work put in last week and over the weekend by all members of our company!

Lastly, I know that Jon has been working hard on getting our oral reports ready, so let's continue to support him and the entire reports division in what is sure to be a very busy week for them.

Let's keep in up the good work in these final weeks of the semester and continue our success.

FINANCE BRIEFING: JESSE NERCESSIAN

The Finance Department is proud to announce that all sales have been accounted for and reconciled with the bookstore. Our approximate net revenue less PA taxes was $3399.96, which is $73.16 more than anticipated before sales began. The Finance Department may now move forward with recording the final company's expenses as the semester comes to a close. Once again, great job to all the divisions and departments with adhering to your budgets.

REPORTS BRIEFING: MORGAN JOHNSON

Now that our service project is almost complete, it is really important for everyone to start getting ready (and getting excited!!!) for the final oral report presentation. Jon and Jen, along with the additional script-writers have been working really hard in preparation for the big day (which for those of you who don't know, is next Thursday!). I know many of your primary jobs are just about completed, but please try to stay motivated and focused for the oral report. We may need some input from you all at one point or another, so please be cooperative. Also, for those of you writing stuff for the company summary, please please PLEASE proofread your writing (asking one of the TAs for help never hurts either). It will cut down on time reports people will need to edit your documents. Get ready, everyone. It's going to be a wild week!!!

SERVICE BRIEFING: KIRK ZAFIROVSKI

We are almost done!!! With the completion of tomorrow's party at the YMCA, Cups?... Nope, Pints!!! will have officially completed our work for the YMCA! As the end of our service project is now upon us, I would like to extend my greatest thanks to the entire company; this has not been the easiest service project and the entire service division would like to thank you for your hard work. The entire companies' flexibility and the willingness of people to help has been a blessing. Just think about the YMCA when we first got there; the entrance to the Warehouse Café was not pleasant on the eyes, but with a little bit of work it looks brand new. The dance center in the basement was just a set of boring walls, but thanks to your work the walls are covered with bright and vibrant color. While I am congratulating everyone on a job well done, do not overlook the party on Friday. It has the potential to be a nuthouse; just think of 200 kids running around a gym and playing games, sounds kind of daunting. However, as a division we have organized a party that we think will be fun and worthwhile. In lab today we will hand out peoples' jobs for the party and prepare them for what they will be doing, so get excited!!! Please be in front of Taylor Hall at 5:50 so we can be there early... DO NOT BE LATE. Finally, thanks to my service division, especially Ryan, Katie, and Andrew for doing such a great job organizing and completing the project. Mike, great job getting publicity for our company with the newspapers.

HRM BRIEFING: ANNIE GUARINO

Great job completing our service project in the past week! The next thing to get excited about is the party. Stacey will be sending out reminders for those of you who are helping out this week. Get excited!!

Just a reminder, keep track of all the hours you spend on oral reports, service, and your primary jobs.

Kelly will be reporting the results of the OWL and PE surveys next week. If you have not completed your OWL survey yet, please do that as soon as possible.

Next Friday is our second company party. We will be distributing a survey to determine what kinds of food and drink we want to have. Pizza party, anyone?

Keep up the great work. For those of you going home this weekend, enjoy the rest and time with your families but also keep in mind that oral reports presentation is just one short week away! Let's continue to kick some serious 101 butt! Cups?... Nope, Pints!!
